Laura, that's fascinating. My father was an architect, and submitted a labyrinth design during the 9/11 memorial competition. I post it on his birthday every year, which will be towards the end of next month!

Hi Ladies. this event is for gay pride week. It is an exploration of both gay history and also ritual exploration with a message of love. I am writing my own songs for it. In the words of the director:

Through the Labyrinth is an experimental work-in-progress by Tyr Jung-Hall, which integrates a complete ritual with a narrative component. It is multi-cultural and ecumenical in nature and the process seeks the complementary aspects of the human experience from both the divine and scientific spheres. Physics and Religion describe human existence from different points of view in order to give the experience of the human condition greater meaning. But most importantly, Through the Labyrinth is about the experiential journey that an individual voluntarily takes when entering sacred space.
