

POEM: Underground

Laura Ann Tull

Jan 19, 2017

Take me to another place.

Wrap me in your cold embrace.

Steal my soul and seal my fate.

I'm underground.

Disintegrating scintillating

Shadows of the world,

We are breaking

Climate changing ever fading

Evergreens turn brown.

Take me to another place.

Strangle me with the lace

You stole from a sacred place.

I'm underground.

Optimism opaque zero

Pessimism becomes our hero.

Charming princes promise visions

We all fall down.

Living in a tragedy

Wanting to be

Something we will never see.

We're all underground.
