Subject: RE: My disappointment with your actions.

Why don't you just drop it with me.

Here's a tip: You can only be a victim if you allow others to make you one. So, stop allowing it. Stop rising to the bait. Stop freaking out everytime people look at you cross-eyed. Get over it and move on.

I don't honestly know what the deal is between you and Olga. You two seem to love antagonizing each other. If you are half as good a person as you like to think you should be the better woman and stop contact with her. Block her number, block her e-mails, react civilly when you see her AT WORK, but don't under any circumstance contact her. As far as I can tell, every time she let's things die down you jump right back on it.

I'm sure she has called you plenty of names in reaction to the names you called her. I witnessed you do it to her on Carnivale without provocation and in a place of work. That is unacceptable behavior as a professional and as a Christian and you should know better.

As far as the deal with Central I have no idea who would have done such a thing. Although I don't doubt your claim I also know Central has made mistakes in the past and would never in a million years admit to one of them. I also don't know what it has to do with me. I will tell you out right that I did not do it, so stop telling me about it.

Again, I was there. How do you know what my intentions were? I wasn't insincere. I really did want you to have a nice holiday. Again, other than being there I had no part in it. I did not dial your number, I did not ask anyone to call you. I did not make any of the idiotic comments you heard. I did react as any one would t the lunacy of it and (I realise I am repeating myself an awful lot) I did strongly urge Olga to be sincere in her apology to you.

So, with all that being said I beg of you to leave me alone. I do not owe you an apology. It seems alot of other folks might, but that has nothing to do with me so piss off. Or as you are fond of saying; May you get what you deserve.
